Temporal dynamics of emergence and dispersal of garter snakes from a communal den in Manitoba

A large-scale mark-recapture study of garter snakes dispersing from an overwintering den in Manitoba quantified variation across time and space in the number and phenotypic traits (sex, size, body condition) of snakes consistent with predictions based on their mating system.