Getting rid of the three screws in the camera would help with assembly and disassembly. This will reduce the amount of waste the camera produces by making the camera able to be disassembled with complete automation. In addition, this simplifies the parts list, thereby making manufacturing more streamlined and reducing the amount of metal used.