

Team 007

In our design team each member completed a Big 5 Survey to assess our strengths and weakness. Our team as a whole has high extraversion score which will allow us to use our extensive knowledge of the world around us to create the best design in the market. Another strength is the general low score for neuroticism in our design team, this will allow us to handle the anxiety, and sometimes anger that comes with making a design project work. Another strength is the teams score on agreeableness, as a whole we scored in toward the middle in agreeableness. This will give us the opportunity to question each other's ideas thus making the design better overall. And our last strength is in conscientiousness. Having a high conscientiousness score means we will achieve high levels of success through purposeful planning and persistence. Our only weakness is not being open to experience. In this area our team scored rather low. This can hurt us by not listening to advice of others that may make the design better as a product. Overall I feel that this is one of the best design teams available, and I feel lucky to be a part of it.
