With the exception of Jichen, our group scores in the mid to high range for extraversion. This means that we shouldn't have a problem being social and meeting each other. This, hopefully, will allow all ideas to be presented without hesitation. Once again, our team scores average in agreeableness which will allow a good number of the ideas presented to be put into action. We, as a group score well above average in the conscientiousness category. Because of this, a mutual respect for each other can be established and everyone will feel free to express their opinion. Once again, Jichen throws off the average in neuroticism. The group scores in the mid-range while Jichen scores low. Jichen will be able to make up with mathematical knowledge where he is lacking in neuroticism. Finally, our group scores in the mid to high range for openness. This is crucial for welcoming new ideas that are presented within the group. I believe that our group is well-rounded and can create an environment for each other in which all ideas are welcome and there is a mutual respect for each other.
