

Team 5

Factor	Kristen Van Tilburg	Nick Natoli	Matt Murphy	Francisco Reluzca
N	51	67	37	18
O	6	11	6	5
C	85	50	80	65
E	20	50	32	77
A	84	42	54	77

Our team's greatest weakness would be a lack of openness. Our highest score for openness was 11 out of 100 potential points, which is very low. We may struggle to accept the different ideas of team members during a design project. It is important to be open-minded when in teams, so this deficit is a weakness. One of our strengths would be our generally high conscientiousness. This means that we will all be aware of the group's needs for us, and we will all be ready to support and strengthen the team. We won't have to worry about one or more of our members being unreliable or not focused on our goal. We may struggle as a team with the diversity in our extraversion scores, or this may serve as an additional strength. The more extraverted team members may not leave enough room for input from the introverts, or they may simply become strong vocal leaders who are able to facilitate the discussion of ideas within the team. We are all relatively agreeable, which is great when attempting to avoid a conflict, but could also lead to us being too willing to give into other's ideas, even when we believe ours or another's to be superior. This lack of competition could lead to a less than ideal product when brainstorming ideas.