Belief of the majority of the people, who think that the time has come for the council to take steps to prevent the failure of the company, to turn over the streets, to which they have no legal right, to the consumers who now use the water furnished by the company. If they can't do this, then compel the water company to vacate the streets, which they have to vacate anyway, in order to install a borough plant, and the solution of the problem will be up to the council. To force the water company to vacate the streets is one of their obligations as property owners of the borough, and right now the council is only fulfilling this obligation.

When Mr. Mengel passed away the paper was taken over and managed by Mr. P. F. Berdaner as business manager and Mr. Grant Mengel as the editor and publisher.
