The first mention of Frackville was in 1858. The community was named after Daniel Miller, John Collihan, and Thomas Beddow. Henry Henry Pearce, Jeremiah Nixon, and Henry Garis, Isaac Miller, John B. W. Doak, John B. Mary Miller, Barbara Keilin, Amanda Lesciher, John Agnew, and Henry resign.

On June 5, 1968, Senator Robert McCollum, Senate Majority Leader, and John H. Read, Minority Leader, delivered the opening address at the dedication of the Walter H. Scott, Jr., United States Post Office and Federal Building in Scranton, Pennsylvania. The address was followed by the singing of the National Anthem and the presentation of the U.S. Flag by a color guard of the Pennsylvania National Guard. The ceremony was attended by over 5,000 people. As the national anthem was sung, the flag was raised to the top of the flagpole. The dedication was performed by U.S. Postmaster General Ben M. Davis, Jr.

The Old Frackville Tales is a collection of stories and historical facts about the town of Frackville, Pennsylvania. The book is divided into sections, each covering a different time period in the town's history. The sections include early settlers, Civil War veterans, and the town's growth and development. The book also includes a list of notable Frackville residents and a directory of the town's businesses.

The Old Frackville Tales book is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the history of Frackville. It is available for purchase online or at local bookstores.