Many residents of town remember Miss Lillian Beard who taught in the Frackville Schools for fifty years. Miss Beard was born in Scranton, September 13, 1888. She moved to Frackville with her family when she was young and attended the Frackville schools, graduating from Frackville High School in 1908. She then attended the University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

Miss Beard received her permanent teaching certificate on July 2, 1918, and was assigned to North School. She taught English language, English grammar, social and written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English, English composition, history of the United States, English literature, and biology. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

In 1923, she took a teaching certificate from the Presbyterian Church Assembly. In 1930 and she took all courses at Kutztown University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

Many residents of town remember Miss Lillian Beard who taught in the Frackville Schools for fifty years. Miss Beard was born in Scranton, September 13, 1888. She moved to Frackville with her family when she was young and attended the Frackville schools, graduating from Frackville High School in 1908. She then attended the University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

Miss Beard received her permanent teaching certificate on July 2, 1918, and was assigned to North School. She taught English language, English grammar, social and written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English, English composition, history of the United States, English literature, and biology. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

In 1923, she took a teaching certificate from the Presbyterian Church Assembly. In 1930 and she took all courses at Kutztown University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

Many residents of town remember Miss Lillian Beard who taught in the Frackville Schools for fifty years. Miss Beard was born in Scranton, September 13, 1888. She moved to Frackville with her family when she was young and attended the Frackville schools, graduating from Frackville High School in 1908. She then attended the University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

Miss Beard received her permanent teaching certificate on July 2, 1918, and was assigned to North School. She taught English language, English grammar, social and written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English, English composition, history of the United States, English literature, and biology. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

In 1923, she took a teaching certificate from the Presbyterian Church Assembly. In 1930 and she took all courses at Kutztown University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

Many residents of town remember Miss Lillian Beard who taught in the Frackville Schools for fifty years. Miss Beard was born in Scranton, September 13, 1888. She moved to Frackville with her family when she was young and attended the Frackville schools, graduating from Frackville High School in 1908. She then attended the University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

Miss Beard received her permanent teaching certificate on July 2, 1918, and was assigned to North School. She taught English language, English grammar, social and written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English, English composition, history of the United States, English literature, and biology. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

In 1923, she took a teaching certificate from the Presbyterian Church Assembly. In 1930 and she took all courses at Kutztown University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

Many residents of town remember Miss Lillian Beard who taught in the Frackville Schools for fifty years. Miss Beard was born in Scranton, September 13, 1888. She moved to Frackville with her family when she was young and attended the Frackville schools, graduating from Frackville High School in 1908. She then attended the University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

Miss Beard received her permanent teaching certificate on July 2, 1918, and was assigned to North School. She taught English language, English grammar, social and written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English, English composition, history of the United States, English literature, and biology. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.

In 1923, she took a teaching certificate from the Presbyterian Church Assembly. In 1930 and she took all courses at Kutztown University of Pennsylvania and was qualified to teach thirteen subjects: orthography, written arithmetic, history of the United States, theory of teaching English grammar, mental and social arithmetic, English, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, trigonometry and biology. Miss Beard taught in the Leddicoat family home for many years. She was paid an allowance for her work and had as many as ninety pupils in her class at one time. She lived at 16 North Balliet street in a home owned by her father built a house at North Balliet street when the family lived for many years. Miss Beard was one of seven children. One had a teaching certificate at a town, another was a business woman, and the other married.