Our team's greatest weakness would be a lack of openness. Our highest score for openness was 11 out of 100 potential points, which is very low. We may struggle to accept the different ideas of team members during a design project. It is important to be open-minded when in teams, so this deficit is a weakness. Strength would be our generally high conscientiousness. Since all of our group members have a high level of conscientiousness, we accept each member to work focused and therefore creating a strong team. Our team is very spread out for agreeableness, which we believe to be strength for our group. We are all not super agreeable so we will have disagreements for the design stage; however, our agreeableness is also high enough that issues can be resolved.

Another issue is there are some high scores for neuroticism. This could be trouble for our groups in stressful situations, however, two of our members scored low, so these members could help balance out the higher scores. Another mixed result is for our extraversion. This is spread out with our group which counters so the lower scores will still be able to voice their opinion.
