Jury Deadlocked in Case Eighteen Men Charged

MERIDIAN, Miss. (AP) — An all-white jury told U.S. Dist. Court Judge Harold Cox at mid-afternoon yesterday it was deadlocked in the case of 18 men charged with conspiracy in the 1964 deaths of three civil rights figures.

The judge ordered them to re-examine and reconsider all the evidence and "take all the time you feel is necessary."

At one point during the second day of deliberations, the jury asked Judge Cox for additional instructions. Opposing attorneys, however, meeting with the judge in his chambers, could not agree and the request was denied.
