Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity will continue their vigil tonight at the foot of the Nittany Lion shrine to guard against any Syracuse attempts to "orange-ize" Penn State's Lion through a coat of paint, according to William Comer, a brother of Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Last year, on the eve of the Syracuse-State football game, three rival students managed to break through the Lion's defenders and spray the granite mascot with orange paint. Sigma Phi Epsilon hopes to prevent a recurrence of this traditional prank.
