Before the commencement of the season the two companies carried out what recent scholars have termed the proto-union of 1706. Both sides appear to have negotiated in bad faith, and though we know the results of a complicated reorganization, we will probably never be sure exactly how it came about. The gist of the matter is that most of Drury Lane’s best actors were allowed to move to the Queen’s Theatre, in return for which Drury Lane was given a monopoly on all music and dance, including opera. Both companies retained the right to stage straight plays, but only Drury Lane could add the entr’acte singing and dancing on which both companies had relied so heavily in recent seasons.

Rumors were flying, many of them inaccurate. On 3 September the Newdigate Newsletter reported that “It is said that her Majesty has ordered all her Servants belonging to the severall Playhouses to act in conjunction with those at the haymarket only otherwise they must expect not to act any where else.” This was no doubt what Vanbrugh wanted, but Rich had not the faintest intention of cooperating. What actually happened was an untidy compromise that satisfied nobody. None of the three principal accounts of the situation is either complete or clear. Downes says tersely that

In this interval [between 23 August and 15 October] Captain Vantbrugg by Agreement with Mr Swinny, and by the Concurrence of my Lord Chamberlain, Transferr’d and Invested his License and Government of the Theatre to Mr Swinny [formerly Rich’s assistant at Drury Lane]; who brought with him from Mr Rich, Mr Wilks, Mr Cyber [Cibber], Mr Mills, Mr Johnson, Mr Keene, Mr Norris, Mr Fairbank, Mrs Oldfield and others; United them to the Old Company, Mr Betterton and Mr Underhill being the only remains of the Duke of York’s Servants, from 1662, till the Union in October 1706. (Roscius Anglicanus, pp. 104-105)

1 Wilson, “Theatre Notes.” See Document Register, no. 1870.
Why Christopher Rich would agree to such an arrangement is anything but clear from Downes’ account, but starts to make sense when we read Congreve’s explanation to his friend Joseph Keally in a letter of 10 September:

The play-houses have undergone another revolution; and Swinny, with Wilks, Mrs Olfield [sic], Pinkethman, Bullock, and Dicky, are come over to the Hay-Market. Vanbrugh resigns his authority to Swinny, which occasioned the revolt. Mr Rich complains and rails like Volpone when counterplotted by Mosca. My Lord Chamberlain approves and ratifies the desertion; and the design is, to have plays only at the Hay-Market, and operas only at Covent Garden [i.e., Drury Lane]. I think the design right to restore acting; but the houses are misapplied, which time may change. (Congreve: Letters and Documents, no. 26)

William Pinkethman did not in fact move to Queen’s, but Congreve was otherwise well informed, and he at least hints at the crucial element in the deal, which was allowing Rich a monopoly on operas. As ads for the season prove, Rich received not only an opera monopoly but exclusive rights to the presentation of song and dance—a tremendous competitive advantage. The comment about “misapplied” houses is an allusion to the acoustics of the Queen’s Theatre, which were apparently a bit echoey, and hence better suited to musical shows than to straight spoken plays.

To make sense of Congreve’s cryptic comments about Rich railing like Volpone when counterplotted by Mosca, we must turn to Cibber, who heard the tale directly from his close friend Owen Swiney. Vanbrugh offered Swiney the whole concern (theatre, costumes, scenery, actors, and the Queen’s license) “upon Payment of only the casual Rent of five Pounds upon every acting Day, and not to exceed £700 in the Year.” Swiney promptly consulted Rich, who agreed because “he had a mind both Companies should be clandestinely under one and the same Interest.” Thinking he was secretly gaining control of Vanbrugh’s theatre and company, Rich gave Swiney his private Consent . . . to take such of his Actors from Drury-Lane as either from Inclination or Discontent, might be willing to come over to him in the Hay-Market. The only one he made an Exception of, was myself: For tho’ he chiefly depended upon his Singers and Dancers, he said it would be necessary to keep some one tolerable Actor with him, that might enable him to set those Machines a going. Under this Limitation of not entertaining me, Swiney seem’d to acquiesce till after he had open’d with the so recruited Company in the Hay-Market: the Actors that came to him from Drury-Lane were Wilks, Estcourt, Mills, Keen, Johnson, Bullock, Mrs Oldfield, Mrs Rogers, and some few others of less note. But I must here let you know that this Project was form’d and put in Execution all in very few Days, in the Summer-Season, when no Theatre was open. To all which I was entirely a Stranger, being at this time at a Gentleman’s House in Gloucestershire. . . .

2 Cibber’s memory was at fault: Estcourt remained with Rich this season.
The first Word I heard of this Transaction was by a Letter from Swiney, inviting me to make One in the Hay-Market Company. (Apology, I, 330-334)

Cibber explains at some length his doubts and his attempts to negotiate with Rich:

I found our Company so thinn’d that it was almost impracticable to bring any one tolerable Play upon the Stage. When I ask’d him where were his Actors, and in what manner he intended to proceed? he reply’d, Don’t you trouble yourself, come along, and I’ll shew you. He then led me about all the By-places in the House, and shew’d me fifty little Back-doors, dark Closets, and narrow Passages; in Alterations and Contrivances of which kind he had busied his Head most part of the Vacation; for he was scarce ever without some notable Joyner, or a Bricklayer extraordinary, in pay, for twenty Years. . . . I would not help now and then breaking in upon his Delight with the impertinent Question of—But, Master, where are your Actors? . . . But to speak of him seriously, and to account for this Disregard to his Actors, his Notion was that Singing and dancing, or any sort of Exotick Entertainments, would make an ordinary Company of Actors too hard for the best Set who had only plain Plays to subsist on.

Cibber demanded either a higher rate of pay per diem “or the Payment of my former Sallery made certain for as many Days as we had acted the Year before.” This Rich refused, and Cibber closed with Swiney’s offer to move to the Haymarket—an offer the more attractive in that “By this time the Hay-Market Company had begun acting to Audiences something better than usual, and were all paid their full Sallaries, a Blessing they had not felt in some Years in either House before.” According to Cibber, Swiney and Rich had made an oral agreement to divide the profits [presumably of the Queen’s Theatre], but with Swiney paying his bills and making good profits he was not sorry to break with Rich and stand on his own feet.

Trying to put these various pieces together, we are probably safe in supposing that Rich had thought he was carrying out a brilliant stratagem by having his tool Swiney take over the rival theatre, and that the protests Congreve reports on 10 September were strictly crocodile tears—but that in fairly short order Swiney actually did doublecross his old master. Rich was left with a wretchedly weak company. Estcourt and Pinkethman were popular low comic actors, and Susanna Mountfort an attractive young comedienne. Beyond that, talent was almost nonexistent. George Powell was a troublemaker of longstanding, and in the Lord Chamberlain’s bad books to boot, but there was no option other than to employ him. Perhaps prudently, Rich rarely advertised even partial casts this year, with the result that we have only a fragmentary roster for the company. The troupe was probably filled out with strollers and the sweepings of the fairs, with bit-part players promoted into principal roles. Mary Morein, for example, is so obscure that save for the accident of a lawsuit about pay at Bartholomew Fair we would not know of her existence, let alone that she had ever been a member of the Drury Lane company (see the discussion of the roster, below).

The plot must have been well under way by 15 August 1706, when Vanbrugh began signing Drury Lane personnel to contracts (see mid-August 1706, above). He could not imaginably have done this unless he had assurances that Rich would cooperate, that the Lord Chamberlain would approve, or preferably both. Adding nine senior actors to a company old but already at full strength created a nasty surplus, and some of the old members and junior members inevitably got squeezed out. Among the Coke Papers is a rather piteous petition from George Bright, undated but clearly assignable to the autumn of 1706. Bright states that he has been a member of the company for 27 years; that he was a sharer; that he had agreed to work for 40s. per week at the Haymarket, but that “under pretence of ye Insufficiency of ye Receipts he was often paid noe more than 6s. 8d. per weeke”; running up debts to support his family, he was arrested and confined in the Marshalsea Prison for eight weeks, “his pay being Stopt by reason of such his Confinement (which never was done to any Actor in ye like Case).” While he was in prison, John Mills (until October 1706 a member of the other company) was sent to him with “an Instrument (in writing) to your Petitioner desireing him to joine with ye other Sharers in ye Sale of ye Cloaths & other Ornaments to Captain Vanbrugh for £500; which if your Petitioner refused to execute, they had orders to carry back ye mony they brought with them.” Bright signed and was released from prison, but the company then refused to employ him or pay him. Clearly the company no longer needed his services, and Bright wound up as a stroller. The prompter John Downes, who had been with the company and its predecessors since 1661, was another victim of the reorganization. When Thomas Newman was hired away from Drury Lane in August, Downes became redundant, and the company dumped him in a thoroughly heartless way. On 27 January 1707 Swiney offered to pay him a pension—clearly a response to prodding from the Lord Chamberlain’s office. Exactly how many actors got forced into retirement or strolling there is no way to say, but between October 1706 and January 1708 two companies of actors became one company, and the process of attrition was probably ugly.

The immediate result of the reorganization was a desperately weak Drury Lane company. Rich’s troupe struggled to life on 24 October, their first ad for the occasion sourly announcing a performance “By the deserted Company of Comedians at the Theatre Royal,” and to judge from a comment in that ad, they had great difficulty in persuading Catherine Tofts to report for duty and perform. Rich had a plentiful supply of musicians, singers, and dancers, but the strikingly small number of performances at Drury Lane this season suggests that the company was in a very unhealthy state indeed.

Meanwhile at Queen's the strongest acting company in modern history was enjoying unaccustomed profits and full salaries despite laboring under the “Inconvenience” of “the immoderate Wideness of their House, in which . . .
the Difficulty of Hearing may be said to have bury’d half the Auditors Entertanainment.”7 The price of stealing the best of Drury Lane’s actors was, of course, dispensing with song and dance and the removal of some popular musicals from the company's repertory. The oddest episode of the year occurred on 10 December, when the company advertised George Granville's semi-opera
The British Enchanters, only to have it suppressed by the Lord Chamberlain's office at the request of the angry author, who was appalled at the idea of performing it “without singing & dancing mauger the necessity thereof.”8 Hamlet had to be substituted. Granville's show was evidently popular enough that the company still wanted to revive it even without its operatic trimnings, and by 22 March management had persuaded the author to make some alterations and allow them to stage the work as a straight play.

Two special subscriptions are noteworthy parts of this season. At Queen's 400 guineas were reportedly raised under the patronage of Lord Halifax, intended to encourage three revivals for gala performances. Each subscriber was to have three tickets at a guinea apiece (more than five times the normal price) for each of the three first nights. Julius Caesar was given on 14 January, A King and no King on 21 January, and The Comical Lovers (Cibber’s conflation of two comic plots from Dryden plays) on 4 February. This was an experiment not soon repeated, perhaps because the audience could see such productions virtually any night. Operas, however, were still a special treat, and a subscription at Drury Lane for the first run of Thomyris raised the startling total of 1200 guineas9 Such sums encouraged cupidity: Heidegger demanded 400 guineas, plus the gallery receipts on the third and sixth nights, plus the receipts of the tenth and twentieth nights less charges—a totally outlandish set of demands by any precedent in the history of the British theatre. Rich had offered 400 guineas, which would probably have been as much as any playwright had ever received for performance of a play in England. What Rich actually had to pay we do not know, and neither do we know what Motteux and Pepusch (who had concocted the pasticcio) received for their work.10 Financing opera was a special problem, and subscriptions to 7 Cibber, Apology, II, 2. Alterations in 1709 apparently reduced the acoustic defects of Vanbrugh's new theatre, but it was never to be an ideal venue for spoken plays.

8 Coke Papers, no. 7.
9 Christopher Rich admits that the advance subscription was “200d Guineas a day for fewer hundred persons for Six dayes” (Coke Papers, no. 8).
10 See Rich’s proposals (printed at the beginning of January in the calendar, below) and Heidegger’s counterdemands (17 January). underwrite expensive new productions were an obvious solution. The outpouring of cash for Thomyris (which was to have only a disappointing run) may have helped convince Vanbrugh that no effort should be spared to acquire the opera monopoly—a prize he was finally to obtain in January 1708.

Both companies appear to have advertised most or all of their performances in the Daily Courant. Arts reportage in the newspapers remained virtually nil, but a new arts monthly made its appearance in January 1707. The Muses Mercury survived only a year, but while it lasted it provided some wonderfully vivid commentary on the theatre world, all of which is printed in full in the calendar.

DRURY LANE

Christopher Rich and Sir Thomas Skipwith continued as patentees. The identity of their acting manager is not known.

REPERTORY. Specializing in opera and musical entertainments because of the reorganization of September 1706, Drury Lane mounted 25 shows on a total of only 89 nights—the skimpiest season in the company’s history. Offerings were particularly thin during the autumn, but remained erratic throughout the season, and the theatre very atypically closed for the summer in early June. The backbone of the company’s repertory was Camilla, which enjoyed a startling 23 performances in its second season (including one at court). Seven plays were given only a single performance. Perhaps surprisingly, the company did not advertise a single afterpiece during this season.
Its two new shows were both operas and both disappointments. Addison and Clayton’s Rosamond (4 March) managed just three nights, its decent libretto betrayed by what Roger Fiske bluntly calls “cretinous” music. Thomyris, a pasticcio with words by Motteux to music arranged by J. C. Pepusch, was staged on 1 April and managed seven performances—minimally respectable, but not enough to make it pay and certainly not what the company was hoping for. Bereft of its best actors, the Drury Lane company appears to have struggled through an undistinguished and unprofitable season. The many gaps in their performance calendar seem a clear indication of poor attendance.

QUEEN’S THEATRE, HAYMARKET

By agreement with Vanbrugh, Owen Swiney leased the theatre, managed the company, and accepted full financial responsibility for the whole operation.

REPERTORY. The newly-augmented Queen’s company mounted an ambitious season of 68 plays on 171 nights. Twenty-seven of those plays received only a single performance. Secure in the possession of virtually every first-rank actor in London, the company did not need to risk much on new plays, though it did première six shows—with one exception enjoying only very indifferent results. Susanna Centlivre’s The Platonick Lady (25 November) had a dazzling cast but limped through just four nights. The author’s grumpy dedication blames prejudice against women writers, but in truth the play was one of her poorer efforts. Mrs Manley’s Almyna (16 December) was a rather stale heroic tragedy in a near-eastern setting, clearly written as a vehicle for Barry and Bracegirdle. It came off after three nights; was revised; and then was deprived of revival by Mrs Bracegirdle’s abrupt retirement from the stage. On 4 February the company premièred Colley Cibber’s The Comical Lovers, an amalgamation of the comic plots from Dryden’s Marriage A-la-Mode and Secret-Love. It was to be revived occasionally to the middle of the century, but managed just three nights in its first season. On 8 March the company staged Farquhar’s last play, The Beaux Stratagem (almost always advertised in the theatre just as The Stratagem) remained one of the most popular plays offered in the London theatre throughout the eighteenth century, and it was an instant success, running up a dozen performances late in the season. On 22 March Vanbrugh’s The Cuckold in Conceit (not published; lost; presumably a translation of Molière’s Sganarelle ou le cocu imaginaire) was performed a single time as an afterpiece. We must presume that it was a Majesties Theatre in Drury Lane,” and that “when the Company was divided [i.e., in September 1706] and Severall of the principall Actors quitted that company” she “at very short warning studied and acted severall parts to the satisfaction as well as benefitt of the said Mr Rich and the rest of the said Company.” On Morein, see Cheryl Wanko, “Mary Morein (fl. 1707): Drury Lane Actress and Fair Performer,” Theatre Survey, 32 (1991), 22-30.

flat failure. The company’s last new play of the season was Edmund Smith’s much-touted Phædra and Hippolitus (21 April). It was a serious classical tragedy with principal parts taken by Betterton, Barry, and Oldfield—but it survived just four nights.

UNPERFORMED PLAY ASSOCIATED WITH THIS SEASON

Injur’d Love: or, the Cruel Husband (Tate). This play was published as Injur’d Love: or, the Cruel Husband. A Tragedy. Design’d to be Acted at the Theatre Royal. Written by Mr N. Tate, Author of the Tragedy call’d King Lear (London: Richard Wellington, 1707). Copy used: Readex. There is a list of persons, but no intended cast. Danchin accidentally omits the prologue and epilogue, which are present in the quarto. Publication was advertised in the Daily Courant of 9 July 1707. We have found no record of performance.

DOCUMENT. Owen Swiney to Colley Cibber: I undertook the management of the playhouse in the Haymarket by and with the advice of some who were Mr Rich's best friends but incensed against him because he trifled with 'em about Vanbrugh's business, he never really intending any thing but the gaining of time. . . . I found that Mr Rich intended nothing but the going on his old way of paying Singers and dancers & not paying the Actors . . . Rich is as tyrannical as Lewis Le Grand. . . . [Swiney complains at length about his treatment by Rich, giving specific instances.] [The transfer of actors to the Queen's Theatre] was to have been kept Secret a fortnight longer till I had gott the people I had pitcht upon among whom was Mr Cibber among the Betterton's Wilks's Barry's &c the paper delivered to My Lord Chamberlain will be my Voucher, his Lordship was big of the plot and was afraid if any body shou'd let it be known at Court before him, he shou'd be Robbed of the glory of Establishing the Stage upon a foot of going on, he told it at the Dutchesse of Malbros the same day Wilks & Oldfield signed and if I had not been pretty brisk the whole matter might have miscarried, for on Monday Mills Bullock Keen Newman & Norris Signed, so that you may see I had no such mean design of lowering the Actors or starving 'em into a compliance with me. I am satisfied that it can't be worse with the Actors any where than where they were as to their Salary, And to show you that I have a very great regard for Mr Cibber he shall be welcome to me when he sees which side is strongest tho' he shou'd be ours. Estcourt must be had tho' he has addrest Mr Rich. . . . I have given every Actor greater Salarys than Rich did and most of 'em benefits paying £40 charge. . . . Unbeliever thine, Owen Swiney. THE RIVAL QUEENS, or the Death of Alexander the Great [Lee]. Cast not known. This performance is known from a handbill quoted in the Observer of 16-19 October 1706. "As I was passing thro' the Borrough, a Fellow popp'd a printed paper into my Hand, which is as follows, 'At the Faulcon Inn, in the Borrough of Southwark, this present Monday, being the 14th day of October, will be presented a Play.'"

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT. The society for the reformation of manners have brought an indictment against 24 actors in the Playhouse for immorality and prophanesse, upon which they are to be tried this term. (Luttrell, VI, 102)

COMMENT. On 5 November Swiney received legal advice (preserved in British Library Add. MS 61,618, fols. 206-211) to the effect that because Wilks, Mills, and Bullock were not named in the indictment they would not be covered by a forthcoming order to drop it. The documents include Swiney’s letter of inquiry and a petition to the Queen from the three actors, together with an undated copy of the offending words they are alleged to have spoken in plays not named. Either Drury Lane had not been indicted or the indictment had already been quashed. For the dismissal of the indictment against Queen’s, see 7 November.

Prologue By Captain Farquhar. Spoken by Mr Betterton. Epilogue Spoken by Mr Wilks. Epilogue Design’d to be Spoken by Mrs Bracegirdle, but came too late. Written by the Author of Tunbridge-Walks [Thomas Baker]. [Danchin, I, 350-353, reprints a third epilogue, “By Mr Norris as a Drawer” from Mrs Centlivre’s Works of 1760. It had already been used for Wilkinson’s Vice Reclaim’d.]

Dedication “To all the Generous Encouragers of Female Ingenuity”: My Muse chose to make this Universal Address, hoping, among the numerous Crowd, to find some Souls Great enough to protect her against the Carping Malice of the Vulgar World; who think it a proof of their Sense, to dislike every thing that is writ by Women. I was the more induc’d to this General Application, from the Usage I have met on all sides.

A Play secretly introduc’d to the House, whilst the Author remains unknown, is approv’d by every Body: The Actors cry it up, and are in expectation of a great Run; the Bookseller of a Second Edition, and the Scribler of a Sixth Night: But if by chance the Plot’s discover’d, and the Brat found Fatherless, immediately it flags in the Opinion of those that extoll’d it before, and the Bookseller falls in his Price, with this Reason only, It is a Woman’s. Thus they alter their Judgment, by the Esteem they have for the Author, tho’ the Play is still the same. They ne’er reflect, that we have had some Male-Productions of this kind, void of Plot and Wit, and full as insipid as ever a Woman’s of us all.

I can’t forbear inserting a Story which my Bookseller, that printed my Gamester, told me, of a Spark that had seen my Gamester three or four times, and lik’d it extremely: Having bought one of the Books, ask’d who the Author was; and being told, a Woman, threw down the Book, and put up his Money, saying, he had spent too much after it already, and was sure if the Town had known that, it wou’d never have run ten days. No doubt this was a Wit in his own Eyes. It is such as these that rob us of that which inspires the Poet, Praise. And it is such as these made him that Printed my Comedy call’d, Love’s Contrivance; or, Medecin Malgre lui, put two Letters of a wrong Name to it, which tho’ it was the height of Injustice to me, yet his imposing on the Town turn’d to account with him; and thus passing for a Man’s, it has been play’d at least a hundred times. [The actual total in London was about 15.]

And why this Wrath against the Womens Works? Perhaps you’ll answer, because they meddle with things out of their Sphere: but I say, no; for since the Poet is born, why not a Woman as well as a Man? Not that I wou’d derogate from those great Men who have a Genius, and Learning to improve that Genius: I only object against those ill-natur’d Criticks, who wanting both, think they have a sufficient claim to Sense, by railing at what they don’t understand. Some have arm’d themselves with resolution not to like the Play they paid to see; and if in spite of Spleen they have been pleas’d against their will, have maliciously reported it was none of mine, but given me by some Gentleman; Nay, even my own Sex, which shou’d assert our Prerogative against such Detractors, are often backward to encourage a Female Pen. . . .

COMMENT. In the Daily Courant of 9 December, The British Enchanters is advertised for this evening. The performance of Granville’s semi-opera was apparently stopped by the authorities on account of a protest by the author, who wrote to Sir John Stanley (the Lord Chamberlain's secretary and Granville's brother-in-law) demanding its suppression. “Sir, I am very much concern'd to find my self under a necessity to bring a Complaint to you, But so it is, that the Players in the Hay-market have put forth Bills for acting the British Enchanters to morrow without singing & dancing mauger the necessity thereof, which I can deem no other than a design to murder the Child of my Brain. Nevertheless when I revolve how happy I am in having so good a friend at Court in a station that gives him so immediate an Authority [sic] over these Enemyes of Reformation, I chear my self with the hopes You will not refuse me a Cap [writ of capias] of your office in forbidding the same to be Acted till farther Order and in doing so you will very much oblige Sir Your most humble & obedient servant G Granville.” (Folger MS V.b. 268; Coke Papers, no. 7) Cf. 22 March 1707.

FIRST EDITION. Almyna: or, the Arabian Vow. A Tragedy. As it is Acted at the Theatre Royal in the Hay-Market, by her Majesty's Servants. Humbly Inscrib'd to the Right Honourable the Countess of Sandwich (London: William Turner and Egbert Sanger, 1707). Copy used: Readex. Dramatis Personae: Caliph Almanzor—Betterton; Abdalla—Wilks; Grand Vizier—Keen; Albador—Bowman; Morat—Corey // Almyna—Mrs Barry; Zoradia—Mrs Bracegirdle. Prologue Spoke by Mr Cibber. Epilogue Spoke by Mr Betterton.

Preface: In Compliance to the Bookseller's importunity, we are oblig'd to tell the Town something by way of Preface, tho' the Author being at a great distance from the House at the time of Representation, can say less of it than the most indifferent Person that was there. All agree, that Almyna was admirably Acted, and advantageously Dress'd. The first was owing to Mr Betterton's unweary'd care, (who is desired to accept the Author's acknowledgments for so faithfully discharging the Trust that was repos'd in him;) the second to Mr Swiny (who, with the like regard, may be assurd of the Author's respects, for venturing upon the good Opinion of the Play, to make so great an Expence) tho' they may be both justly condemn'd for playing it, at so ill-fated a Time, viz: The immediate Week before Christmas between Devotion and Camilla (the Eunuch [Valentini?] having then never Sung but once) it met with as good Audiences as could be expected. Mr Wilks (the Ornament and Support of the declining Stage) had a long Indisposition that follow'd soon after. Then Mrs Bracegirdle's quitting the House, three days before it was to have been Play'd again, with the Alterations annex'd, has hitherto hindered us to see what better Fortune it might have had tho' Mrs Barry scarce ever play'd better, nor Mrs Bracegirdle (in Tragedy) so well, nor with such variation of Voice. She so far Acted her self into the kind wishes of the Town, that in Compliment to their better Opinion, the Author has thought fit to make her happy in her Lover. In the next Representation, the Ceremony in the first Act is design'd to be omitted, upon the dislike of that incomparable Lady, to whom this Play is Inscrib'd . . . The Character of Almyna was drawn (tho' faintly) from that excellent Pen of Mr Dennis, who, in his Essay upon Opera's, has given us a View of what Heroick Vertue ought to attempt: That it was printed no earlier, was upon the expectation of Mrs Bracegirdle's return to the Stage. But the Season being far advanced, 'tis hoped, that the publishing of it, may be a Means to prepare the Town against next Winter, for a new and kind Reception of it.

COMMENT. The apparent reference to Valentini performing at Drury Lane (in Camilla? singing additional songs?) is surprising, since he was not advertised there until 8 March. Publication was advertised in the Daily Courant of 16 May 1707.

CONCERT. This concert is known from publication of a song “For the Performance of Musick at York-Buildings on the Thanksgiving-Day, December the 31st, 1706. By Nahum Tate Esq; Her Majesty’s Poet Laureat.” The song (“O Whither will thy Triumphs Spread”), which involves a chorus, was printed in the Muses Mercury for January 1707.

DOCUMENT. At about this time Christopher Rich submitted a proposal to the Lord Chamberlain’s office concerning what Heidegger should be paid for Thomyris. The advance subscription was “200d Guineas a day for fower hundred persons for Six dayes.” Heidegger has refused one proposal (that referees decide the compensation), and Rich now makes another. Rich is willing to accept responsibility for obtaining “the Translation of this Medley Opera . . . with the Score & parts” and to spend “300d Guineas in the Dressing & Decoration of it & for Printed books for the Subscribers & that Mr Heidegger have all the Subscription money for the 4th day & sixth day it shall be perform’d being 400d Guineas & Mr Rich to have the rest of the money.” Rich complains that he would rather stage “Mr Claytons Opera call’d Rosamond” anyway, and that he had “procured the Translation & Score of Camilla for less then £200,” has other operas available to him, and “thinks himselfe hardly used to putt by other good Bargains meerly for Mr Heideggers Interest & profitt.” (Coke Papers, no. 8)

COMMENT. For Heidegger’s counter demand, see 17 January. Heidegger’s relationship to the opera (arranged by Pepusch and translation ultimately provided by Mot-teu) is unclear. Thomyris received its première at Drury Lane on 1 April and proved a success.

WIT WITHOUT MONEY (Written by Beaumont and Fletcher) [actually by Fletcher]. Cast not advertised (but see below). (Daily Courant)

EDITION. Wit Without Mony [sic], A Comedy, (With Alterations and Amendments, by some Persons of Quality.) As it is now Acted at the Queen's Theatre In the Hay-market, By Her Majesty's Company of Comedians (London: John Morphew, n.d. [1707?]). Copy used: University of Texas. Publication was advertised in the Daily Courant on 29 May. Persons represented: Valentine—Wilks; Francisco—Mills; Lovegood—Keen; Merchant—Minns; Fountain—Knap; Bellamore—Fairbank; Hairbrain—Bowman; Lance—Bullock; Short-hose—Norris; Roger—Cross; Ralph—Kent; Humphry—Trout // Lady Hartwell—Mrs Oldfield; Isabella—Mrs Porter; Lucy—Mr[s] Mills.

Prologue. Epilogue. Danchin (I, 357-358) reprints the prologue and epilogue, pointing out that the prologue also appears in an undated edition of The Scornful Lady.

Dedication (unsigned): To my very Good Friend Mr Thomas Newman, Servant to Her Majesty, one of the Gentlemen of the Great Room, and Book-Keeper and Prompter to her Majesty's Company of Comedians in the Hay-Market, &c. When I was resolv'd to print this Comedy, with the Alterations and Improvements it has had from some Persons of Honour, I imagin'd the next thing I had to do, was to choose a proper Patron for it. . . . The title of it seems to have such a relation to your Affairs for some time past, that nothing could have given a fairer occasion for a Dedication. . . . This is very well apply'd to you, who once belong'd to a House [i.e., Drury Lane] where Vivitur Ingenio was the Motto, till Sound got the better of Sense, and turn'd it out of Doors. Your Wit for a great while, at that time, was forc'd to keep you. . . . I cou'd be lavish in your Praise with relation to your Business in the Play-House, make large Encomiums on the Vigilance you always show in your Station, for keeping the Order and Decorum of the Stage; set down the Hazards you have jointly run, with those who have bravely stood up for the Glory of Acting; And, that as you are Prompter to the best Company of Players, so none but your self is capable to serve such a company . . . After all the frightful Prospect you have had of Trouble and Confinement, you are now where Wit is encouraged, and the Player reaps the Fruit of his Labour, without Toiling for those [i.e., Christopher Rich and Sir Thomas Skipwith] who have always been the Oppressors of the Stage.

Upper Gallery 1s.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT. While the Stage was thus recovering its former Strength, a more honourable Mark of Favour was shewn to it than it was ever known before or since to have receiv'd. The then Lord Halifax was not only the Patron of the Men of Genius of this Time, but had likewise a generous Concern for the Reputation and Prosperity of the Theatre, from whence the most elegant Dramatick labours of the Learned, he knew, had often shone in their brightest Lustre. A Proposal therefore was drawn up and addressed to that Noble Lord for his Approbation and Assistance to raise a publick Subscription for Reviving Three Plays of the best Authors, with the full Strength of the Company; every Subscriber to have Three Tickets for the first Day of each Play for his single Payment of Three Guineas. This Subscription his Lordship so zealously encouraged, that from his Recommendation chiefly, in a very little time it was compleated. The Plays were Julius Caesar of Shakespeare; the King and no King of Fletcher, and the Comic Scenes of Dryden's Marriage à la mode and of his Maiden Queen [i.e., Secret-Love] put together. . . . By the Aid of this Subscription, which happen'd in 1707, and by the additional Strength and Industry of this Company, not only the Actors (several of which were handsomely advanc'd in their Sallaries) were duly paid, but the Menager himself, too, at the Foot of his Account, stood a considerable Gainer. (Cibber, Apology, II, 4-5)
COMMENT: According to the Muses Mercury the value of the subscription was 400 guineas (see 25 January), a sum also named in a source that is late, anecdotal, and shaky on the date: “The paper all in Lord Halifax’s hand of a subscription of four hundred guineas for the encouragement of good comedies was dated 1709 [recte 1707], and soon after that they [members of the Kit-Cat Club] broke up.” (Pope, supposedly speaking on 28 or 29 November 1730). See Joseph Spence, Observations, Anecdotes, and Characters of Books and Men, 2 vols., ed. James M. Osborn (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1966), I, no. 122. The special “Prologue to the Subscribers for Julius Caesar, Spoke by Mr Betterton. Written by Mr Dennis” was published in the Muses Mercury for January 1707, and is reprinted by Danchin, I, 359-360.

J. J. Heidegger. (Coke Papers, no. 9)

COMMENT. Heidegger was demanding far more than a normal author’s benefit, even without considering that the receipts of the third and sixth nights would include 200 guineas of subscription money on each occasion. Heidegger was responding to a proposal by Rich (see ca. early January). What he was finally paid we do not know.

Saturday 25

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT. Of the Opera’s and Plays now Preparing for the two Theatres in Drury-Lane and the Hay-Market. The many excellent Productions of that great Master, the late Mr Henry Purcell, particularly his Opera of the Prophetess, that of King Arthur, The Musical Parts of Oedipus and Bonduca, are sufficient Proofs that no Nation in the World, the Italians only excepted, have out-done the English in Dramatick Music: And it is to be question’d, whether the Italians themselves come so near Nature, as Mr Purcell did in the Musick of those Opera’s and Plays; and whether there is any thing so moving at least, on the Roman and Venetian Stages. Perhaps our Taste was to blame if he fell short of the Best Masters in Italy, by his accommodating his Compositions to the Relish of his Audiences, for who can doubt but he who Set the Frost Scene in King Arthur, cou’d have done any thing in the great Musick whenever he attempted it.

’Tis plain that the Taste of the Town is mended since his time, and the late Success of Arsinoe, Set by Mr Clayton after the Italian manner, shews that our Masters can excel in all the Parts of Harmony, and our Audiences relish them, as well as the Italians, that even their Recitativo’s have been heard with Delight, and consequently understood, which 40 Years ago wou’d have been receiv’d with the Disdain that Art meets with from the Ignorant.

These Entertainments, as they are the finest, so they are the most Expensive; and the Profit of Common Audiences cou’d never have supported them. Twas this Consideration that put the People of Quality upon Incouraging the Publick Diversion by their Private Subscriptions; some Thousands of Pounds have been contributed by them to the Charges of the Decorations of our Opera’s, and they have had the Pleasure to see the whole Town pleas’d by it.

This has Invited Gentlemen of equal Honour and Merit, to employ their leisure Hours to continue so Charming and Innocent an Entertainment. And their undertaking to furnish the Masters with Poems, has prevail’d with the Great to give it further Incouragement. The Opera of Rosamund, written by the Author of the Campaign [Addison], is Set by Mr Clayton, and Practising at the Theatre in Drury-Lane; and the Beauty and Harmony of that Poem, which we have had the honour to see, are very happily imitated by the Composer, in the Opinion of the best Judges, who have heard what he has done. The Opera of Semelé, for which we are Indebted to Mr Congrev’le is Set by Mr Eccles, and ready to be Practic’d, and from the Excellence of those two Masters, in their several Kinds, the Town may very well expect to be charm’d, as much as Poetry and Musick can Charm them. The Opera of Orlando Furioso, the hint of which was taken from that of Quinault, famous for his Tallent in this Sort of Writings, is Set by Mr Daniel Purcell. The Gentleman’s Character who writ it, and who has distinguish’d himself as much by his Judgment in the Arts of Musick and Poetry, as by his Bounty to the Professors, can leave to room to doubt but the Fineness of the Sentiments, and the Harmony of the Numbers, have given Mr Purcell an Opportunity to do Honour to the Memory of his Brother. Mr Motteux is also writing an Opera on the Story of Thomyris; which will be compos'd by Mr Hidaker [Heidegger] a German, after the Italian Manner. Or rather the Finest Parts of some of the best Italian Opera's are to be accommodated to Mr Motteux's Words.

Besides these, There is a Masque of Mr Dennis's on the Story of Orpheus and Euridícé, wherein, whoever will give themselves the trouble to compare it with the Orpheus and Euridícé an Elegy, written in French by Monsieur Sarrafin, or with a Masque by an Anonymous Author, often perform'd on the French Stage, will see that our English Poets have not been behind hand with our English Hero's, in reducing the French Wit to as low a state as their Arms. We shall Print the Masque in our Next Mercury; and the World will then perceive that the Author has done his Part, as well as the Composer, whose Musick, on this occasion, is very much commended.

'Twas Impossible that all these Opera's cou'd be Perform'd in due time, had not those Gentlemen, who are the Protectors of the Stage, endeavour'd to have the Theatres in Drury-Lane and Dorset-Garden set apart for Music; and the Queen's Theatre in the Hay-Market, for Plays, the former Company being under the Direction of Mr Rich, and the latter under Mr Swinny's, both whose Experience in the Management of such Things are too well known to need a Comment. In Consequence of this Partition, the two Separate Companies of Actors have Joyn'd, and form'd a Set of Comedians that may vie with the Best that ever trod the English Stage; notwithstanding what has been said, in Praise of the Players in King Charles's Reign, by such as are always fond of Speaking well of the Dead, at the Expense of the Living. The Company in the Hay-Market have only Acted two New Plays this Winter, both written by the Fair Sex: The Platonick Lady, a Comedy, by Mrs C[entlivre], who wrote the Gamester and Almyna, or the Arabian Vow, by Mrs M[anley]. She took the Hint of it from the Arabian Nights Entertainments, translated lately into English; written in French by Monsieur Galand of the Academy. The Fortune of these Plays has been over too long to make it News to the Town to know it. There are now in the House, The Spartan Dame, A Tragedy by Mr Southern; who has so often drawn Tears from the Fairest eyes in England by his Oronoko, and Fatal Marriage; Another on the Story of Phædra, by Mr Smith of Oxford, which has an Extraordinary Reputation among all who have seen it. Mr Farquhar, who wrote the Recruiting Officer, has a Comedy ready for Representation; and had not the Death of a Dear Friend hinder'd Capt. Steel from finishing a Comedy of his, it wou'd also have been Acted this Season. There have several Plays been Reviv'd at the Hay-Market, but none that have had a run long enough to be taken notice of. The last, which was the Julius Caesar of Shakespear, was Play'd at the Desire of some Persons of Quality, who have contributed £400 by a subscription to Support the Dramatick Muse; for which They are to have Three Plays acted, and the Pit and Boxes to be reserv'd for the Subscribers; the Galleries only being for the Benefit of the House. The Second Play that was Acted on this Occasion, was, The King and No King, of Beaumont and Fletcher; and the Third, which will be acted on Tuesday the 28th Instant, is not yet nam'd. From such noble Spirits as these, the Arts may hope for a Glorious restoration: and those who are any way Employ'd for the Stage, cannot say now if they do not succeed, 'twas for want of Encouragement. (Muses Mercury, January 1707)

COMMENT. The first issue of this new arts journal appears to have been published about 25 January. It was to survive only thirteen issues, and it came out increasingly late, but it contains important contemporary commentary. Southerne’s The Spartan Dame was not actually performed until 1719.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT. The Dispute about the Stage Reviv’d. One wou’d have thought that after the many Answers which were written to Mr Collier’s Book against the Stage, that Dispute wou’d never have been reviv’d: But ‘tis observable, That all the Enemies of the Drama triumph, as if Mr Collier had struck his Adversaries Dumb, and not a word had been said in Vindication of it. Indeed, who would imagine it needed any Vindication, when Her Majesty has vouchsaf’d to Favour it, and a New Theatre has been since Built under Her Auspices, and Honour’d with Her Royal Name. When she has since Commanded some of those Plays to be Acted at St James’s, which were Insolently treated in the Short Views: And the Reverend Judges have order’d the same Comedies, or Plays of the same Character, to be represented before them at the Temple. This one wou’d think was enough to have silenc’d the Clamour against the most Pleasant and the most useful Diversion that ever was Invented for the Minds of Men. But Mr Bedford, a Minister of Bristol, has faln upon it anew, and found leisure from his graver Studies to pick out 2000 Passages in our Modern Plays, which he Fancies are opposite to the late Successful Endeavours by the Societies of Reformation to suppress Debauchery. Considering Mr Bedford has taken all those Passages out of Plays that have been Acted within these Two Years, it must be confess’d that he has labour’d Indefatigably to Ruin the Theatres; and we leave it to his Brethren to decide, whether Two Years reading might not have been more usefully employ’d in his own Faculty—Tho’ this Sage Divine has not said one thing to the Purpose which Mr Collier had not said better before, and been effectually Answer’d; yet the Friends of the Stage finding her attack’d again, have thought fit again to Vindicate her; and a Treatise on that Subject is Publish’d by Dr Filmer, called, The Stage Vindicated against Mr Collier [A Defence of Plays]; Wherein is offer’d the most probable Method of reforming our Plays and a Consideration how far vicious Characters may be allow’d on the Stage [see 10 January]. This Controversy is like to be of no long Continuance. For Mr Bedford has got very little ground by his Labours, unless ‘twas his Arguments which put a stop to the Playhouse that was Building at Bristol at the Charge of Mr E—rl, a Merchant of that City, and the Dr copes with an Adversary who looks too Contemptibly on all Mankind to think any of ’em deserve Answering. When a sober and seasible [sensible?] Project of Reforming the Drama shall be offer’d to the Concern’d, no doubt ‘twill be acceptable: For ‘tis certainly the Interest as well as the Reputation of any [word?] Society to have real Abuses reform’d. (Muses Mercury, January 1707)

Comment. The Reverend Arthur Bedford was among the most conspicuous, noisy, and long-lived of the Collierites. The Evil and Danger of Stage Plays was published by W. Bonny and the Booksellers of Bristol in 1706, and distributed in London by Henry Mortlock. (For notice of publication, see 19 October 1706.) Bedford had published two sermons against the theatre in 1705, printed another big book on the subject in 1719, and was a conspicuous opponent of Goodman’s Fields when it opened in 1729.

CONCERT. For the Benefit of Mr Sweet and Mr Isum [Isham]. At the Great Room in York-Buildings . . . will be an extraordinary Consort of Vocal and Instrumental Musick, perform'd by the best Masters, and two Voices that never perform'd in Publick before. To begin at 8 a Clock: Tickets may be had at the Door at 5s. each Ticket. (Daily Courant)

DOCUMENT. Sir, the Reason why I did not Receive Mr Downs into the Musick was because he was utterly unqualified, And tho' our Constant Charge is already so high that I am very ill able to carry on ye businesse, yet I am very unwilling to disobey My Lord [Chamberlain] in any command that his Lordship pleases to lay on me, yet I was in hopes his Lordship woud not have insisted on any of that Nature, at least while I labour under the disadvantage of Mr Rich's being suffered to Act plays, Notwithstanding the Extraordinary Encouragement the town has given the Opera: but however since his Lordship seems to commiserate the Case of Old Mr Downs rather than his son, I am ready to allow the father such Pension As his Lordship shall think proper: but the son will only disorder the Musick, And I woud rather the mony may be given where there is the better pretence to ask it: And I hope his Lordship will take such Measures as may enable the Comedy to go on by preventing Mr Rich's Acting, as soon as the Subscriptions for his New Opera's begin. I am Sir Your very humble Servant Owen Swiny. Hay-Market January 27th 1706/7 (LC 7/3, fols. 94-95) [Annotated: "Mr Downs to have a pension."]

COMM. The recipient was evidently Sir John Stanley or Vice Chamberlain Coke. John Downes had been forced into retirement at the time of the company reorganization in September 1706. Nothing else is known of his son. The amount of the pension is not known, but Downes apparently had trouble collecting it from later managers. A letter written in response to the Tatler of 22 September 1709 comments that “Mr Downs, who had been prime Minister to so many Buskin'd Monarchs, is thrown aside into a Pension, which like those at Court, are not long well paid.” See The Post-Man Robb'd of his Mail, [ed. Charles Gildon] (London: Bettesworth and Rivington, 1719), p. 266.

FIRST EDITION. The Comical Lovers. A Comedy. Acted by Subscription at the Queen’s Theatre in the Hay-market (London: Bernard Lintott, n.d. [1707]). Copy used: Readex. Publication was not advertised until the Daily Courant of 5 December 1707. The Dramatis Personae confirms the newspaper cast. We have found no dedication, prologue, or epilogue in the copies we have examined. Cibber received £10 15s. from Lintott for the copyright on 9 October 1708 (Nichols, VIII, 294).

COMMENT. The “new Prologue” was not printed with the play and apparently does not survive. This play is a conflation of the comic subplots in Dryden’s Secret Love (1667) and Marriage A-la-Mode (1671). For Cibber’s comments on the subscription series, see 14 January. Of this pastiche, he says that it was merely “the Comic Scenes of Dryden’s Marriage a la mode and of his Maiden Queen put together; for it was judg’d that, as these comic Episodes were utterly independent of the serious Scenes they were originally written to, they might on this occasion be as well Episodes either to the other, and so make up five livelier Acts between them: At least the Project so well succeeded, that those comic Parts have never since been replaced, but were continued to be jointly acted as one Play several Years after." (Cibber, Apology, II, 5)

ADVERTISEMENT DETAILS. Never Acted before. . . . By Subscription, with a new Prologue. . . . The Boxes to be open’d to the Pit, and none to be admitted but by the Subscribers Tickets, which will be deliver’d this Morning at White’s Chocolate-house in St. James’s-street.

THE UNHAPPY FAVOURITE, or, the Earl of Essex [Banks]. Earl of Essex—Wilks; Earl of Southampton—Mills; Burleigh—Keen; Queen Elizabeth—Mrs Barry; Countess of Rutland—Mrs Bracegirdle; Lady Nottingham—Mrs Bradshaw. (Daily Courant)

COMMENT: This is the last advertised performance by Anne Bracegirdle save for the famous Betterton benefit of 7 April 1709. The reason for her abrupt withdrawal from the company is not known. An anecdote in a biography of Anne Oldfield explains the event as follows: “Not long after, as Mrs Oldfield daily improved in her Profession, a Dispute was set on Foot (whether first started between themselves or by the Town, I will not pretend to determine) whether she or Mrs Bracegirdle, who was then the most Celebrated Actress at that Time, could best perform a Part in Comedy. This Contest, however it first began, grew at last so considerable, that ‘twas agreed to make the Town the Judges: Accordingly, The Amorous Widow; or, The Wanton Wife was pitch'd upon as the Play; and to determine this important Point, ‘twas order'd that it should be acted two Nights successively, and that Mrs Bracegirdle, as being the Senior, should have the Preference of the first Night, and play the Wanton Wife, which same should the next Night be performed by Mrs Oldfield: never did that not as yet forgotten Contest between the Signoras Cuzzini [Cuzzoni] and Faustina [in 1726] keep the Beau Monde more in anxious Suspense, or occasion more Effusion among the Toupees, and fluttering of Fans among the Ladies, than this Emulation of our Heroines did in the Beaux and Belles of those Times.

‘The long expected Night being come, the Senior Championess appear’d, attended with such a Croud of Beaux as might be expected from a long unrival’d Superiority, and perform’d her Part, as usual, to such Admiration, as inspir’d a Confidence into all her Friends, and made Mrs Oldfield’s well Wishers dread the Issue would not be in her favour. However, the next Night, when our Heroine graced the Stage, and had spoke but ten Lines, such was the gracefulness and beauty of her Person, so enchanting the harmony of her Voice and justness of her Delivery, and so imitable her Action, that she charm'd the whole Audience to that Degree, they almost forgot they had ever seen Mrs Bracegirdle, and universally adjudged her the Preeminence; which very much disgusted her celebrated Antagonist; and Mrs Oldfield’s Benefit being allowed by Mr Swinny to be in the Season before Mrs Bracegirdle’s, added so much to the Affront, that she quitted the Stage immediately.” Authentic Memoirs of the Life of that celebrated Actress Mrs Ann Oldfield, 3rd edn (London: Printed and Sold by the Booksellers and Pamphlet-sellers of London and Westminster, 1730), pp. 19-21. (The authors of the Biographical Dictionary, II, 275, erroneously attribute this story to the “Egerton” [i.e., Curll] biography of Oldfield.)

Striking as this tale is, it is almost undoubtedly untrue. The performance calendar for the Queen’s Theatre company appears to be complete at this time, and there is only a single performance of The Amorous Widow recorded this season (7 February), and that without any advertisement of the cast. Oldfield may well have been outshining Bracegirdle, or Bracegirdle may have seen the handwriting on the wall.
There may, however, have been more immediate reasons for her abrupt withdrawal.
An anonymous poem “To Mrs B—g—le, upon her leaving the Playhouse” (“At length, O Nymph, forget injurious Rage”) was published in the Muses Mercury of “May” 1707. The author implies that a manager (i.e., Owen Swiney?) promoted another actress (Anne Oldfield?) in return for sexual favors (“He gave a Day where he might hope a Night”). Whether there is any truth to these charges we cannot tell.

‡ ROSAMOND [Joseph Addison and Thomas Clayton]. Cast not advertised (but see below). (Daily Courant)

FIRST EDITION. Rosamond. An Opera. Humbly Inscrib'd to Her Grace the Dutchess of Marlborough (London: Jacob Tonson, 1707). Copy used: Readex. Dramatis Personæ: King Henry—Hughs; Sir Trusty—Leveridge; Page—Holcomb; Messenger—Lawrence // Queen Elinor—Mrs Tofts; Rosamond—Mrs Gallia; Grideline—Mrs Lindsey.

The prologue and epilogue were not printed in the 1707 edition, but were published in the March 1707 issue of the Muses Mercury: Prologue to Rosamond Spoken by Mars. By W. W. Esq: Epilogue to Rosamond. They are reprinted by Danchin (I, 362-363), who reports that when they were published in 1709 the prologue was ascribed to William Walsh. The Muses Mercury explains that “The following Prologue was spoken by Mr Powell, who at that time had the Misfortune to lie under my Lord Chamberlain’s Displeasure for other things. And my Lord not having then declar’d that Mr Powell might return to the Stage, the House was suspended [see 5 March]; which gave rise to a Report, that it was for some Offence taken at the Prologue: Whereas nothing cou’d be better receiv’d than this was by the Audience. Indeed the Character of the worthy Author is such, that none who are acquainted with it can believe he cou’d offend, when he endeavour’d to please. And to shew that this Report was groundless, he no sooner spoke to my Lord Chamberlain in behalf of the House, but the Suspension was taken off.”

ADVERTISEMENT DETAILS. Never yet perform’d. . . . By Subscription. None to be admitted into the Boxes or Pit but by the Subscribers Tickets, which are to be deliver’d out this Morning at Mr White’s Chocolate-House in St. James’s-street.

COMMENT. Publication was advertised in the Daily Courant of 5 March. Walsh and Randall published the music in two installments. Songs in the New Opera Called Rosamond, “Compos’d by Mr. Tho: Clayton,” a collection comprising 14 songs, was advertised in the Daily Courant on 10 March. (See Hunter, no. 37.) They issued a much fuller version with 42 songs, advertised in the Post Man on 29 April 1707. (See Hunter, no. 38.)

CONCERT. We deduce this concert from a Daily Courant ad of 2 April by Francesco Conti for a public performance of "the Consort of Musick Compos'd by him for her Majesty, and which he had the Honour to have perform'd at Court the day the act for the union pass'd." Whether the performers were the same there is no way to tell, but de l'Epine, the Baroness, and Valentini were advertised on 2 April. Isaac's Union dance was performed by Mrs Santlow and Mons. Des Barques (Bucholz, Augustan Court, Table 7.5).

COMMENT. According to Luttrell, VI, 145-146, the House of Lords passed the union bill on 4 March, and on Thursday 6 March Queen Anne "gave the royal assent to the union bill, at which time the Tower guns, &c. were discharged, and made a speech" expressing her satisfaction. A concert was evidently part of the celebration.

‡ THE STRATAGEM (Written by the Author of the Recruiting Officer) [George Farquhar]. Cast not advertised (but see below). (Daily Courant)

FIRST EDITION. The Beaux Stratagem. A Comedy. As it is Acted at the Queen's Theatre in the Hay-Market. By Her Majesty's Sworn Comedians. Written by Mr Farquhar, Author of the Recruiting Officer (London: Bernard Lintott, n.d. [1707]). Copy used: Readex. Dramatis Personae: Aimwell—Mills; Archer—Wilks; Count Bel-lair—Bowman; Sullen—Verbruggen; Freeman—Keen; Foigard—Bowen; Gibbet—Cibber; Boniface—Bullock; Scrub—Norris // Lady Bountiful—Mrs Powel; Dorinda—Mrs Bradshaw; Mrs Sullen—Mrs Oldfield; Gipsey—Mrs Mills; Cherry—Mrs Bignal. Prologue Spoken by Mr Wilks. An Epilogue, Design'd to be spoke in the Beaux Stratagem.

Advertisement: The Reader may find some Faults in this Play, which my Illness prevented the amending of, but there is great Amends made in the Representation, which cannot be match'd, no more than the friendly and indefatigable Care of Mr Wilks, to whom I chiefly owe the Success of the Play. George Farquhar.

ADVERTISEMENT DETAILS. Never Acted before.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT. The first night that it was performed, his good friend Mr Wilkes came to give him an account of its great success, but remarked to him that Mrs Oldfield (who performed the character of Mrs Sullen) thought he had dealt too freely with her character in the Play, by giving her to Archer without a proper divorce, which was not a security for her husband; 'to salve this, replied our author, I'll get a real divorce, marry her myself, and give her my bond she shall be a real Widow in less than a fortnight.' The Works of Geo: Farquhar, 3 vols. (Dublin: Thomas Ewing, [1775]), I, xii-xiii. This late anecdote, supplied in Thomas Wilkes' prefatory "Life of George Farquhar, "may be apocryphal, but it hits tellingly on a genuine oddity in the play's moral and legal treatment of divorce.

COMMENT. Publication was advertised in the Daily Courant of 27 March. Farquhar received £30 from Lintot for the copyright on 27 January 1706/7 (Nichols, VIII, 296). Some major cuts and alterations were imposed, perhaps as early as the second day of the initial run. The edition of 1728 has a note at the point at which Count Bellair enters in III.iii: "This Scene printed in Italick, with the entire Part of the Count, was cut out by the Author, after the first Night's Representation; and where he shou'd enter in the last Scene of the fifth Act, it is added to the Part of Foigard."

On these textual changes, see Farquhar, Works, II, 143.

COMMENT. Thomas Wilkes states in his "Life of George Farquhar" prefaced to the 1775 Dublin edition of the Works (I, xiii) that “On the third night of it’s being performed, which was for his Benefit, he died, which was the last week in April 1707.” This is clearly a patheticized tale: the third night was before the middle of March and Farquhar’s death probably did not occur until mid-May, since he was buried on the 23rd of that month. See Works, ed. Kenny, I, xix, and II, 123.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT. Of the New Opera's and Plays. We should have given a larger Account of the Opera's and Plays that have been Acted or performed since our last Mercury, but we are so streighten'd for Room that we can say little of them in this. The Opera of Rosamund was perform'd Tuesday the Fouth of March; and the Town has by its Applause justify'd the Character we presum'd to give it from our own Judgment. The Harmony of the Numbers and the Beauty of the Sentiments are universally admired. It has been disputed whether the Musick is as good as that of Arsinoe; but, without entering into Comparisons, it must be confess'd, that the Airs of Rosamund are fine, the Passions touch'd; and there being such a vast difference between the Merit of the Poems, the Dispute, 'tis probably, when decided, will be determin'd in Favour of Rosamund.

Mr Farquhar's new Comedy called the Stratagem, has been acted several times with Success. It is not certain which of the Opera's mention'd in our last, will be perform'd next, but Mr Hidaker's [Heidegger's] is in the greatest Forwardness.

We are inform'd there will be a Subscription for the Incouragement of the Dramatick Muse, with a Prize for Comedy; if not for Tragedy; which being the [word?] Muse, one wou'd have thought shou'd have had the Pref-ence. (Muses Mercury, “February” 1707)

THE BRITISH ENCHANTERS, or, No Magick like Love [Granville]. Cast not advertised. At the end of which will be presented a new Farce, (never Acted before) call'd, ‡ THE CUCKOLD IN CONCEIT [John Vanbrugh; not printed—lost]. Cast not advertised. (Daily Courant)

ADVERTISEMENT DETAILS. With all the Original Scenes, Machines, and Decorations. To which will be added several new ones, particularly, the intire front prospect of Blenheim Castle. And another Piece alluding to the late glorious Successes of her Majesty's Arms, &c. . . . With a new Prologue and Epilogue.

COMMENT. The Daily Courant of 20 March advertises the mainpiece as “Lately Revis'd and alter'd by the Author.” Granville had apparently been prevailed upon to accept the lack of music (cf. 10 December 1706). The new material was published in Granville's Poems of 1712. Vanbrugh's new afterpiece was not published and is apparently lost. It was presumably an Englishing of Molière's Sganarelle ou le cocu imaginaire. A “Prologue to The Cuckold in Conceit. Made for Norris to speak to the Ladies” by Arthur Maynwaring was published from a manuscript at Blenheim by Snyder and has been reprinted by Danchin (I, 366-367). An “Epilogue Address'd to the Officers bound for Flanders” also by Maynwaring and also printed by Snyder from a Blenheim manuscript may have been used on this occasion. For discussion and text, see Danchin, I, 366-367.

‡ THOMYRIS [text by Peter Anthony Motteux; music arranged by J. C. Pepusch]. Cast not advertised (but see below). (Daily Courant)

FIRST EDITION. Thomyris, Queen of Scythia. An Opera, As it is Perform’d at the Theatre Royal in Drury-Lane. Most Humbly Inscrib’d to the Right Honourable the Lord Ryalton. By P. Motteux (London: Jacob Tonson, 1707). Copy used: British Library 162.k.39. The Persons Represented: Thomyris—Signiora Margarita, who sings a Treble; Orontes—Mr Hughes, or Signior Valentino, a Contra-tenor; Cleora—Mrs Tofts, A Treble; Tigranes—Mr Lawrence, A Tenor; Baldo—Mr Leveridge, A Bass; Media—Mrs Lindsey, A Treble. Prologue. [No epilogue.]

Preface: Tho’ all the Airs of this Opera are by the famous Scarlatti and Buononcini, except a few by other great Masters, neither the Words, the Thoughts, nor the Design owe any thing to Italy, except the Advantage of the Musick; to which, with more Pleasure yet than Pain, I have endeavour’d to make ‘em subservient: I hope those who would not have Sense sacrific’d to Sound, nor the Mind displeas’d while the Ears are entertain’d, will consider the Difficulties in working so many Airs of different Kinds into one Subject, and in putting Words wholly different from the Italian, to Songs so full of pathetick Notes and nice Graces, in a Language perhaps too manly for such Composures [sic], if not manag’d with the utmost Art. As here the Choice of the Songs was not my Province, I may the better do Justice to the Gentleman who provided that part of the Entertainment. Tho’ Musick is only his Diversion, the best Masters allow him to be so good a Judge, that I have no Reason to doubt but his Collection will be generally approv’d; tho’ ‘tis impossible that, in such a Variety, every Thing should please every particular Fancy. As for the Recitative, Mr Pepusch is known to be so great a Composer, that there is no doubt but he has also done his Part in that, and in adding such Ritornels, and other Musick, as were necessary to make the whole a Compleat Opera.

Pray Note, That throughout the Opera whatever is mark’d thus “ with double Comma’s in the Margent [sic], and between two black Rules, is left out, to shorten the Performance. The Part of Orontes being Sung by Signior Valentino, at the Desire of most of the Nobility who subscrib’d for the first Performance of this Opera, you have here the same in Italian, as it is translated out of English, and adjusted to the same Musick.

ADVERTISEMENT DETAILS. A new Opera. . . . By Subscription. The Front Boxes and Side Boxes to be laid open into the Pit, where none are to be admitted but by the Subscribers Tickets. And the Stage, Boxes, Balconies, and Galleries, are for the Benefit of the House.

COMMENT. Valentini submitted a 22-item costume bill totalling £25 17s. 3d. for reimbursement. For full transcription of his French bill and a translation, see Coke Papers, no. 10. A collection of seventeen Songs in the New Opera Call’d Thomyris, “Collected out of the Works of the most Celebrated Italian Authors viz Scarlatti Bononcini and other great Masters” engraved by Walsh and Randall, was advertised in the Daily Courant on 31 May 1707. (See Hunter, no. 40.) A 53-song collection was probably available ca. 1 June (Hunter, no. 40a). On 5 June a paginated letterpress edition of 53 songs with title page and prelims was advertised by John Cullen: Songs In the New Opera of Thomyris, Queen of Scythia (Hunter, no. 42). On 7 June a 35-song collection engraved by Walsh and Randall was advertised in the Post Man (Hunter, no. 43). On the further complexities of publication of music for Thomyris, see Hunter, nos. 43a, 44, 44a, and 45 (all from about the same time). A 56-song collection was published by Walsh and Hare on 31 December 1711 (Hunter, no. 82).

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT. Of the New Opera's and Plays. The present Humour is so much for Opera's, that the Stage has been troubled with fewer new Plays this Winter, than we have seen in one Season, since the two Houses were divided. Whether the Town has got or lost by it, let others judge: but as indifferent as our new Plays us'd to be, they were so reasonable a Diversion, that they pleas'd longer than the Opera's are likely to do. If Plays were bad, 'twas chiefly because there was but a bad Price paid for them, and the Poets cou'd not be at the Expence of much Thought, at the Rate their Poems went off at. Half the Encouragement given to them, which has been given to such as are concern'd in the Performance of Opera's, wou'd have produc'd Plays that shou'd always have pleas'd. For we have no Reason to doubt, but there are Genius's now living, who are qualify'd to succeed as well as their Predecessors: And by Succeed, we do not mean to Take, but to Deserve.

Mr Smith's Phædra and Hippolitus will be play'd about the Middle of April: And tho that Gentleman's Friends have perhaps done him Justice only, in the kind Things they have said of his Tragedy; yet the raising the Expectation of the Audience so much, before 'tis acted, is very dangerous. If the Play answers, it will be a Service to the Drama, as well as to the Author. We don't hear of any other Play of Note that will be represented this Season; and cannot hope for many more the next, unless the Poets are encourag'd a little, as well as the Singers, Dancers, &c.

We have been in an Errour, with many others, as to Mr Hidaker's [Heidegger's] being the Master who manag'd the Musick of Thomyris. It seems he only made Choice of the Airs; and Mr Motteux put the Words to them. They are almost all taken from Scarlati and Buononcini, and English Words adapted to them: but for the sake of the Eunuch, Signior Valentino's Voice, his Part was sung in Italian always, because he did not understand English, and there was not much lost by it: For the Italian manner of Singing is such, that few of the Audience would have known the Words, had they been sung in English. However this Novelty has given occasion to some Criticks to make themselves merry with things, which have been admired by so many fine Audiences. Great Allowances should indeed be made the Poet, who was to find out Words for such Variety of Airs; and such Airs as are not, they say, to be match'd by the Italians themselves. Now we know the best they can do, I hope we shall be satisfy'd, and not think all the Pleasure of the Theater confin'd to that of Rome. The recitativo's, the Ritornei, and the other Musick of this Opera, was compos'd by Mr Pepusch; and the Subscribers have given as much Encouragement to it, as would have furnish'd the Town for a whole Winter, with as Good Tragedies and Comedies as they have seen these twenty Years. But we cannot say, that even in this Case the Poet has been consider'd so much as one of the Voices may expect, before the first Run of the Opera is over. (Muses Mercury, "March" 1707)

 FIRST EDITION. Phaedra and Hippolitus. A Tragedy. As it is Acted at the Queen’s Theatre in the Hay-Market, By Her Majesty’s Sworn Servants. By Mr Edmund Smith (London: Bernard Lintott, n.d. [1707]). Copy used: Readex. Dramatis Personæ: Theseus—Betterton; Hippolitus—Booth; Lycon—Keen; Cratander—Corey // Phaedra—Mrs Barry; Ismena—Mrs Oldfield. The Prologue Spoken by Mr Wilks. The Epilogue Spoken by Mrs Oldfield.

Dedication to Lord Halifax: As soon as it was known that Your Lordship was not displeas’d with this Play, my Friends began to value themselves upon the Interest they had taken in its Success. . . .

ADVERTISEMENT DETAILS. Never Acted before.

COMMENT. Smith received £50 from Lintot for the copyright on 11 March 1706/7. The 1719 edition credits Addison with the prologue, Prior with the epilogue. The prologue enquires sarcastically “How would it please, should she in English speak, / And could Hippolitus reply in Greek?”—clearly a snide reference to bilingual performances of Thomyris at Drury Lane in which Valentini was singing in Italian and the rest of the cast in English. Publication “Next Week” was advertised in the Daily Courant of 12 May, with the comment “A number will be printed on fine Paper to be sold for 2s. each.” Actual publication was not advertised until the Daily Courant of 14 June. The failure of this serious “classical” tragedy sat ill with those who believed that the English stage had become frivolous and that it was trivialized by the vogue for Italian opera. Writing four years later, Addison commented sourly: “Would one think it was possible (at a time when an Author lived that was able to write the Phaedra and Hippolitus) for a People to be so stupidly fond of the Italian Opera, as scarce to give a Third Days Hearing to that admirable Tragedy?” (Spectator, no. 18, 21 March 1711)

ADVERTISEMENT DETAILS. Never Acted there before. For the Entertainment of his Excellency the Muscovite Ambassador. . . . Being the last time of the Company's Acting this Season.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT. Of the New Opera's and Plays. The Summer Season is so far advanc'd, that there can be little News expected from the Theaters. And had not the Managers of the Stage depended very much on the Merit of Mr Smith's Phædra and Hippolitus, probably they would not have delay'd acting it till the Town began to grow thin—Whatever was the Cause of it, let others determine. 'Tis certain every Body was disappointed in the Run of the Tragedy, which was acted but a very few Nights, and that with Intervals: Neither were the Audiences so throng'd as was expected, unless it was on the third Night, when the Author had a very fine Appearance, and had as much giv'n him by his Bookseller for his first Tragedy, as Mr Dryden had for his last. The Play is printed, and has been now seen by the Curious, who after the Recommendation and Character that it came abroad with, were afraid for Euripides and Racine: Notwithstanding which they find their Fears are vanish'd, and Phædra, and even Monsieur Hippolite, as Dryden is pleas'd merrily to stile Racines Hippolitus, maintain their Ground. Indeed there is so much Art and Delicacy in the Conduct of Racines Phædra, such a Mixture of Pity and Terror, Majesty and Beauty in his Sentiments; so much Justness, Sweetness and Elegance in his Expressions, that it would have been surprizing, if we shou'd have found all these Qualities in a young Poets first Play. For the future we shall wish for our own Dramatick Friends, that the Expectation of their Audiences be not too much rais'd, since a Man's Reputation is in risk of losing more after his Play is acted, than he got before by it. As to this Phædra; 'tis not our Business to treat of it critically: if the Publick had communicated any such Work to us, we question whether we shou'd have printed it. Because where there's hopes of an Author's deserving well hereafter, 'twere foolish as well as unjust to discourage him now. Besides, Mr Smith's first Performance is by much better than the Tragedies of some Famous Writers, whose Plays have been crowded for ten or twelve Nights together.

All that love Comedy will be sorry to hear of the Death of Mr Farquhar, whose two last Plays had something in them that was truly humorous and diverting. 'Tis true the Criticks will not allow any Part of them to be regular; but Mr Farquhar had a Genius for Comedy, of which one may say, that it was rather above Rules than below them. His Conduct, tho not Artful, was surprizing: His characters, tho not Great, were Just: His Humour, tho low, diverting: His Dialogue, tho loose and incorrect, gay and agreeable; and his Wit, tho not super-abundant, pleasant. In a word, his Plays have in the toute ensemble, as the Painters phrase it, a certain Air of Novelty and Mirth, which pleas'd the Audience every time they were represented: And such as love to laugh at the Theater, will probably miss him more than they now imagine.

We are told that Mr Row will write a Tragedy against the next winter, and that another eminent Poet who has so often succeeded in Comedy, will do the same. Indeed 'tis necessary those who have serv'd the Stage, shou'd do their utmost to support her; for there's little hopes of her maintaining her self by the Credit and Character of her new Servants. The Difficulty will oblig[e the Town to think still of Opera's, and we hear the Subscriptions will be continu'd; we shall hereafter mention for whose Benefit. (Muses Mercury, “May” 1707)

DOCUMENT. On this day Richard Steele brought a cross-action in Chancery to block a suit for debt against him by Christopher Rich. Steele says that circa December 1702 Rich paid him £72 for a play yet to be written, with that sum to be deducted from the author’s benefit, with a performance bond of £144. Rich rejoins that the £72 was a loan; that Steele failed to produce The Rehearsal at Goatham as promised; and that profits from The Tender Husband were insufficient to repay the loan. (C7/642/44)

COMMENT. On this day Viscount Tunbridge (very possibly drunk) picked a quarrel with Owen Swiney outside the Haymarket theatre. We know of the incident from an abject letter of apology that Swiney wrote to Tunbridge; affidavits from two bystanders, Thomas Dean, victualler, and John Symson, jeweller, stating that Swiney had given no apparent provocation, but that a "gentleman" had drawn his sword and chased him into the theatre; an undated note from Swiney [to Coke?] professing the affidavits in his justification; and a letter dated 13 September from Lord Mohun [to Coke?], who was evidently Tunbridge's companion at the time of the incident. See the Coke Papers, nos. 11, 12, and 14 for full texts.

‡ THE SIEGE OF TROY [Elkanah Settle]. Performance of this show at Bartholomew Fair this year is known from an ad for the company at Epsom the following spring (Daily Courant, 5 May 1708) and from the published text of 1715.

FIRST EDITION. The Siege of Troy, A Dramatick Performance, Presented in Mrs Mynns's Great Booth, in the Queens-Arms Yard near the Marshalsea Gate in Southwark, during the Time of the Fair. Containing A Description of all the Scenes, Machines, and Movements, with the whole Decoration of the Play, and Particulars of the Entertainment (London: Printed in the Year 1715). Copy used: Harvard. Actors Names [long character descriptions, but no actors' names]. [No prologue.] Epilogue.

To the Reader. A Printed Publication of an entertainment performed in a publick Fair, which, how gay or richly soever set off, will hardly reach to a higher Title than the customary name of a DROLL, may seem somewhat new. But as the present Undertaking, the Work of near ten Months preparation, is so extraordinary a Performance, that without Boast or Vanity we may modestly say, In the whole several Scenes, Movements and Machines, it is no ways Inferior even to any Opera yet seen in any of the Royal Theatres; as thousands of Living Witnesses, that saw it at its first performances, Eight Years since in Bartholomew Fair [i.e., in 1707?], will acknowledge, nor is the least part of its Original Grandeur now diminisht in the present Fair; we are therefore under some sort of Necessity to make this Publication, thereby to given even the meanest of our Audience a full Light into all the Object they will there meet in this Expensive entertainment; the Proprietors of which have adventur’d to make, under some small Hopes, That as they yearly see some of their happier Brethren Undertakers in the Fair, more cheaply obtain even the Engrost Smiles of the Gentry and Quality at so much an easier Price, so on the other side their own more costly Projection (though less Favourites) might possibly attain to that good Fortune, at least to attract a little share of the good Graces of the more Honourable part of the Audience; and perhaps be able to purchase some of those Smiles, which elsewhere have been thus long the profuser Donation of particular Affection and Favour.

COMMENT. Morley, chapter 18, quotes at length from a Bragg edition of ?1707 with slightly different prefatory matter. The British Library copy catalogued as the 1707 edition (11774.b.16) is in fact from 1716: it refers to performance nine years earlier at Bartholomew Fair and reports a Southwark Fair cast of 1716.

Pinkethman’s Dancing Dogs. This entertainment is known from a broadside extant in a unique copy in the Newberry Library, dated 30 August 1707 by Luttrell. It has been reprinted in facsimile with analysis (and transcription of the prologue) by Danchin, I, 379-380 and plate following. The Fair in an Uproar, or, The Dancing Doggs. As they Perform in Mr Pinkethman’s New Opera in Bartholomew Fair [engraving and prologue only] (London: J. Morphew, n.d. [1707]). Publication was advertised in the Post Boy of 28-30 August.
